Where to look for the best real estate investment opportunities

ANREV is pleased to invite you to an afternoon briefing in Seoul on 8 June 2016.

In the short term, the dominant concern for investors remains uncertainty over the length of the current global cycle. However, institutions are increasing their allocation to real estate in their search for stable income returns. Investors are also seeking portfolio diversification by investing in overseas markets. The real estate sector is responding to these demands and becoming a truly global market.

Despite the geo-political and economic challenges, most forecasts still suggest that 2016 will be another year for growth. The challenge lies in selecting those markets that will deliver the best income and capital returns.

During this briefing, Jana Sehnalova, Managing Director of Forum Securities, a La Française member firm, and David Rendall, Director of International Real Estate Development at La Française, will respectively provide insight into global real estate securities and core European real estate investment opportunities.

As one of the largest collective vineyard real estate investment managers in Europe, La Française will offer an exclusive wine tasting after the briefing.
